Harding Warns Coal Men To End Idleness

Points Out Necessity of Quick and Lasting Agreement In Interest of Public—Refusal Will Mean Government Operation—Conference Organized.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, July 1.—In his speech to the operators and coal miners today, President Harding spoke as follows:

"Gentlemen of the coal industry: I asked you to meet me here this morning, with the thought that in bringing you together, I might be serving both the mine workers and the mine operators of the United States, and at the same time serving the great American public to which both you and I are obligated. I hold no specific authority under which to admonish you, but I do have the right to invite your immediate attention to a situation which deeply concerns the country, the solution of which you collectively owe to the American people."

President Harding did not mention federal control by name. He adopted the more delicate way of putting it, but throughout the president's brief speech to the warning actions, it was made clear that the administration is keeping "a steel hand in a velvet glove" and that if the miners and operators cannot get together, then the government is going to take the consuming public.

The "kick" in the president's speech was near the end. He said: "You are admonished to arrive at such understanding with measurable promptness, among yourselves. If the adjustment cannot be reached by you alone, government will be available at your joint call. We wish you who best know the way to solution, to reach it among yourselves, in a manner to command the sanction of the people."

"Failing in that, the servants of the American people will be called to the task, in the name of American safety and for the greatest good of all the people."

The president appealed to both the miners and operators to resume operations pending settlement of the strike. "Operations ought to be resumed," he said. "With diminishing fuel supplies, menacing shortages as we turn to winter's approach, with unemployment visiting its hardships on idle miners, it would seem to be the simplest common sense to find acceptable ground on which to resume activities, with commitment to achieve the righteous adjustments which may well be expedited in common consent."

"You who are here today represent a large sponsorship for America's supply of fuel. In that sponsorship, you have an indissoluble relationship to the commonwealth of America. Coal is indispensable to our life as a people, and since this country has afforded you the opportunity of development on your part, both as workers and operators, you have created, in turn, an obligation to serve. Conflicting views as to your policies and your obligations to one another in no wise modify your obligations to that public which made possible your industrial existence."

"Because of expiring agreements relating to wage scales and working conditions a large percentage of the mining activities of the country have been suspended three months to a day. It is not for me to touch on the merits of your opposing positions. I have not called you as a partisan of the mine worker or the employer. I do not mean even to discuss a single phase of controverted questions. The main point is to bring you together and in that contact of men to men, mindful of the necessity of the righteousness in any useful and abiding relationship, to have you frankly and fairly consider your problems in their relation to the welfare of our common country."

"It is pretty generally recognized that there are fundamental difficulties in present coal production, the solution of which is not to be found in an hour or a day of most friendly and earnest conference. The excess development of a productive capacity, in both tonnage available, and miners to work it, has presented one situation demanding solution or there will be inevitable loss to property interests and a train of unprofitable employment."

"The war upheaval and all attending inflation and excess productions have left an inevitable and unavoidable liquidation. The interference in employment has made it impossible for mine workers, who are only employed partial time, to pursue their trade at wage rates adjusted to other employments. No industry can be held secure, where employment is compensated on a basis of half time or two-thirds of the normal, natural work period of an American wage earner."

"There has been instability of production, attended by a failure of delivery capacity which has reflexed in speculative prices and panicky conditions, which encouraged profiteering, and menaced our industries and hampered our varied public services. Labor has the right, capital has the right, and above all else, the American public has the right to be freed from these recurring anxieties, no matter what the causes are. That freedom must be established."

"The government has no desire to intrude itself into the field of your activities, but it does feel an obligation to see the common American interest shall not be menaced by a protracted lack of fuel. If prefers that the two great and associated interests—mine workers and employers—should settle this matter in a frank recognition of the mutuality of your interests. If you cannot do that, then the larger public interest must be asserted in the name of the people, where the common good is the first and highest concern."

"I have said that the fundamental problems probably cannot be solved in a hurried conference. But this conference might well devise the agency for effecting a solution. This is the purpose of calling you together, the beginning of solution. Meanwhile operations ought to be resumed. Meanwhile with diminishing supplies, with menacing shortages as we turn to winter's approach, with unemployment visiting its hardship upon idle mine workers and with vast ownership without return on investment, it would seem to be the simplest common sense to find acceptable ground on which to resume activities, with commitment to achieve the righteous adjustments which may well be expedited in common consent."

"This is no time for the militant note of the radical who would prefer to destroy our social system, no time for the extremist who thinks the period opportune to break down organized labor. The government has no fear for either of them, but would gladly lend its cooperation in curbing the extremes of both. More, the government gladly tenders you its good offices, in striving for righteous solution. It has no desire to participate in a merely temporary makeshift. For the good of all the people, the government craves a way to permanent stability, tranquility, and ample freedom of employment at just wages, righteous freedom for workers and righteous freedom for management and a secure freedom from recurring menaces of suspended activities. It is not a question as to what influences dominate, who wins, who yields most in settlement. There is indisputable justice in all relationships about which public opinion never fails to be right, and I invite you to prescribe that relationship for your mutual good and the country's common good."

"You are admonished to arrive at such understanding with measurable promptness among yourselves. If the adjustment cannot be reached by you alone, government aid will be available at your joint calling. We wish you who best know the way to solution, to reach it among yourselves, in a manner to command the sanction of American public opinion. Failing in that, the servants of the American people will be called to the task in the name of American safety, and for the greatest good of all the people."

"Suitable accommodations for your conference await your arrival. By agreement I am able to announce a temporary organization with A. M. Ogle to preside and William Green to be your secretary. I have asked Secretaries Fall, Hoover and Davis to be your escorts, and to be of every assistance possible, as official hosts to such a company."

"Let me remind you that tolerance, fairness, the spirit of give and take, and finally, a sense of the larger obligations to the public are essential to successful conference."

"And I commend your executive sessions and assume full responsibility for such a recommendation, even as I assume the safeguarding of the public interest in asking you to come together. Difficulties are more often magnified than composed in their parading, and the call of the hour is adjusted differences, with due concern for the public welfare."

"I thank you all alike for your response to my invitation, and I express the hope that in the realization of your responsibilities, and in an appraisal of your obligations, in the face-to-face, man-to-man, and citizen-to-citizen contact, you will find a way to a just concord which the American public may gladly acclaim."

EDWARD ROWE HELD UP, BUT WAS SAVED BY AUTO.

Edward Rowe of Clifton avenue had a thrilling experience with holdup men Friday afternoon about 5 o'clock, but the timely approach of an automobile caused the two bandits to take to their heels. At the time young Rowe was walking and pushing his bicycle ahead of him up the road on Flatbush avenue, near the City Home, when two rough-looking men stopped him and asked the way to Albany. He told them and then started on when they called to him to come back. Just what would have happened next is not known as just then an auto rounded the turn in the road and the two men leaped into the wayside bushes and disappeared from sight.

Willie On Big Garage Floor.
The floor space in the Smith garage on Clifton avenue, head of Main street has been willied, being a great improvement not only as to appearance but can be more easily kept in a clean condition. While the garage parking room is of large size the new willied floor makes it appear as much larger.

FORM HOTEL CORPORATION SOON

Subscription And Pledges Reach Point Warranting Promoters In Filing Incorporation Papers Early Next Week.

Total subscriptions of $127,900 for stock of the new hotel on the Sharpe property at Albany and Clinton avenues, opposite Academy Park, and the prospect that the remainder of the $150,000 allotted to Kingston and Ulster county stockholders will be taken assures the hotel for Kingston, and the next step will be the formation of the hotel corporation, which will take place next week.

The necessary papers for the incorporation of the hotel will be drafted as quickly as possible and filed with the secretary of state at Albany as soon as they can be signed by the incorporators. The fourth of July holiday may delay matters for one or two days until the incorporators return and can sign the papers, but the necessary signatures are expected to be procured and the articles of incorporation to be filed as early next week as possible.

Meanwhile the canvass will be continued among the men and women of Kingston and Ulster county who wish to become stockholders in the hotel which already is known among tourists and in hotel publications as "Oscar's Hotel."

The total stock subscriptions of $127,900 which were reported at a meeting of the canvassers held at the Chamber of Commerce rooms on Broadway Friday evening represents only the amount of stock for which subscriptions actually have been signed, and does not include those who waited until today to sign the subscription blank in order to make payment of the initial installment out of interest and dividends received today. Also it does not include those who stated they wished to wait until after the first of July before determining just the amount of stock for which they wished to subscribe.

As soon as the articles of incorporation are filed at Albany and in the county clerk's office, the hotel corporation will be in a position to issue certificates for shares of stock to those who have paid their subscription in full, which has been done both by subscribers to large amounts of stock as well as those who have subscribed to smaller amounts. As soon as installments are completed by each stockholder, such stockholder will receive a certificate of shares of stock which he or she owns. Naturally, the certificates cannot be issued until the last installment has been paid, and then they are issued.

The shares of stock are entitled to dividends of seven per cent per annum and dividends are cumulative from the date the stock is issued. The stock as a matter of course cannot draw dividends until the hotel is in operation and has an income, out of which dividends are paid, but the seven per cent dividend rate becomes effective from the time the stock is issued, and begin to accumulate from that time.

The stock which has been subscribed for to the amount of $127,900 is seven per cent cumulative preferred stock, and with each two shares of preferred stock there is given one share of common stock as a bonus. If the preferred stock should fall to pay dividends for three years, control of the corporation thereupon automatically passes to the holders of the preferred stock, who are thus safeguarded. The holders of common stock do not receive dividends until all accumulated dividends on the preferred stock have been paid in full, and then the common stockholders also share in the profits.

Other nearby cities have been trying to get Oscar Tschirky interested in hotel propositions but he has declined them all, explaining that his interest lies in Ulster county, where his home is located and where his family lives. The same efforts to secure his interest have been made by other cities in New York and other states with the same result, because "Oscar" has carefully explained that his heart is in Ulster county and Kingston. Ever since he has been a resident of Ulster county "Oscar" has explained this condition to thousands of the patrons of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel with whom he has come in contact, and that news has traveled far and wide. Probably his well known love for Kingston and Ulster county is responsible in no small measure not only for the attention which "Oscar's Hotel" already has received but also explains the readiness shown by his friends of influence and wealth in New York to enter the new hotel project with him. A cooperative spirit among the men and women of the community in which the hotel is to be built is a desirable asset for any hotel in any of the smaller cities of the United States, and such a spirit exists always where men and women are stockholders in an enterprise.

The most important fact to Kingston is that the hotel is now assured and the hotel corporation will be formed next week. The canvassers will meet again on Thursday night. The directorate of the new corporation will, of course, include Ulster county stockholders.

New Notaries.
The following have been appointed notaries public in and for Ulster county by Governor Nathan L. Miller: Roy W. Ball, 183 Canal street, Ward Wilklow, 5 Park street, Ellenville; Grover C. Hedges, Mt. Pleasant; Robert J. Howard, 213 Elmendorf street, John B. Sterley, 148 Pine street, Kingston.

WOODSTOCK BATH HEARING PUT OVER

Judge Van Etten, for Those Enjoined, Secures Adjournment for a Week—Linson Hearing Set for Next Saturday.

After a brief hearing this morning before Judge Hasbrouck, an adjournment was taken in the Woodstock bathing matter which came up before Judge Hasbrouck on the return of the injunction obtained by Corporation Counsel Walter N. Gill in behalf of the city water board to restrain the people of Woodstock from bathing in the Kingston city water supply. Dr. Mortimer B. Downer of Woodstock, health officer of that town, and four others, were served with an injunction Wednesday by Sheriff Kolts. The injunction was returnable this morning at special term.

Judge John G. Van Etten, of the firm of Van Etten & Cook, who appeared on behalf of the Woodstock people, stated that he was not familiar with the matter, having been retained by the Woodstock people only a day or two ago and therefore asked for a week's adjournment. This was agreed to by Corporation Counsel Gill, who appeared for the city board.

The injunction consists of several paragraphs and restrains the defendants or their agents or servants and all other persons to whom notice of the injunction may come from entering on the property which has been leased by the city along the Sawkill creek. The action on the part of the city is to keep persons from trespassing only on lands which have been posted by the city with "No Trespass" signs and a statement to that effect was made by Corporation Counsel Gill to Judge Van Etten at the hearing this morning, which was for the purpose of continuing the injunction during the pendency of the action.

An adjournment was taken until next Saturday, when the matter will be argued at special term before Judge Hasbrouck.

An adjournment was also taken in the Linson matter which involves the question of whether John J. Linson, former assistant secretary of the board of public works, was engaged for a period of one year or whether his appointment was of a temporary nature. He claims that it was for a year and therefore should receive pay for that period, even though he has been removed from the position. This matter was also adjourned until next Saturday. Ex-Mayor William D. Brinnier, who represents Mr. Linson, was out of town and Judge William D. Brinnier, Jr., who appeared, asked that an adjournment be taken as he was not familiar with the case.

TRAINS WILL RUN, SAYS WASHINGTON

If Labor Board Can't Deal With Railway Situation a More Powerful Branch of Government Will Intervene.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, July 1.—"Trains will be kept running and the public will be protected."

This laconic statement today by a high official of the government, expressed the attitude of Washington officials generally, in the face of the strike of 400,000 railway shop-crafts men.

Further than that officials were for the most part silent. Until the strike of railroad workers assumed such proportions as to interfere with train operations, in short, until the situation is such as to warrant its being termed "a public emergency," Washington will lie back and watch the Railway Labor Board wrestle with the problem, according to all indications.

The attitude of President Harding and his advisers generally, can be summed up thus: The Railway Labor Board is on trial. It is the agency set up by congress to deal with railway wages and working conditions. When it speaks, it is the government speaking. If it fails to accomplish the purposes for which it was created, then one branch of the government has failed, and it will be up to another branch to take such steps as the situation may warrant.

It is clearly realized that the labor board is without any authority whatever to enforce its decisions or to "forbid" the strike. The government has no means of compelling the men to work, although the Transportation Act under which the board was created, does lodge authority with the government to keep interstate lines of traffic open and operating.

It is likely that the situation will come up for discussion in the senate shortly. With a congressional campaign in progress, members of congress view with considerable perturbation the twin coal-rail industrial chaos.

JOHN M. CASHIN IS MAKING GOOD

Young Kingston Lawyer Who Succeeded Former Mayor Canfield as Special Assistant U. S. Attorney. Disposed of 225 Cases and Collected $25,000 in Fines.

Attorney John M. Cashin of this city, who succeeded former Mayor Palmer Canfield as special assistant United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, is making good in his new work.

The past week he disposed of 225 cases of violations of the Volstead act, and fines were imposed amounting to over $25,000. This is the largest number of cases to be disposed of in some time.

The New York city newspapers speak highly of the work as being carried on by Mr. Cashin, who is showing an unusual aptitude for the duties of the office.

Maximum Sentence Imposed.
Edward F. Gannon and Thomas E. Rossi, who pleaded guilty on Wednesday to the charge of petit larceny in the theft of the automobile belonging to John F. Smith of Highland, which was alleged to have contained whiskey, were sentenced Friday by Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins to serve a term of one year in Westchester county penitentiary and to each pay a fine of $500.

The sentence is a maximum allowed under the law for the crime charged, and came as a surprise to the large court room full of spectators.

Railway Shop-Crafts Strike as Scheduled

Reports at Chicago Show Jewell's Order Being Generally Obeyed—Will Not Affect Train Operation Until Roads Are Compelled to Let Equipment Deteriorate.

DISORDER BEGINS IN SHOP STRIKE

Unionists Start Attack on Mexicans in Chicago And Washington Strikers Destroy Equipment—For Strike-Breakers.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Chicago, July 1.—First word of disorder in connection with the railroad strike came in a report to police headquarters here, that several hundred Mexicans in a concentration camp on the Rock Island Lines at Blue Island, in the southern section of the city were engaged in a riot with the strikers. Early reports to the police gave few details. Reserves were immediately ordered out to quell the disturbance.

Washington, July 1.—The first skirmish between railroad workers and "Special Police" in the strike of the shopcraft union, occurred near Washington.

No one was injured, but the police had a busy hour preventing a riot at the Ivy City Roundhouse between the workers and a squad of special policemen employed by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, late last night.

The specials arrived at the roundhouse with cots and bedding. The workers decided they looked like "scabs" and ordered them to clear out. While the special police were looking for the city police to protect them, the workers, according to a report to the police today, destroyed the cots and other paraphernalia.

SOBSEYS BUY A LANDMARK

The four family stone tenement house and adjoining building at 51-53 North Front street, sold for former Mayor William D. Brinnier through Brinnier & Carey, real estate and insurance agents, Friday, to Joseph and Dora Sobsey, is one of the landmarks of Kingston. It was owned by Abram Banker in 1771, who then was clerk of the State Senate of New York. Besides the stone tenement house there is a two-story concrete mercantile building occupied by Frank Jantley as a fruit and vegetable store and as a dwelling. In the rear are two large barns occupied by Mr. Jantley for storage purposes.

Robert N. Lisberger and wife have conveyed by deed a parcel of land of 439 feet frontage on the north-easterly side of Albany avenue which is of about 200 feet depth, to Etlio Voight of this city.

Negotiations are pending for the sale and transfer of the large parcel of land with buildings thereon at 638-642 Broadway owned by Alfred S. Bush of 40 Elmendorf street to Joseph Palisi. The prospective purchaser has for a long time of years been a tenant of Mr. Bush conducting a fruit and vegetable store at 638 Broadway, it being a modern two-story brick store and dwelling. The property at 640-642 Broadway is occupied by Leon Feder as a variety store on the street floor, the upper floors of the building, a three story frame structure which has a large depth with rear wing, is occupied by Dr. Reuben E. Smith, veterinarian, and as furniture storage rooms by Mr. Bush. Mr. Palisi recently purchased the C. A. Davis property adjoining. He will purchase the Bush properties as an investment and remain at his present location which is part of the realty soon to be conveyed.

Hurt In Auto Accident.

Josephine Clark and Rita Modest, both of New York city, were injured in an auto accident on the Rosendale road Friday night. They were removed to the Kingston City Hospital where it was found that their injuries were not serious and they were later discharged.

Auto and Truck Collide.

Friday afternoon, while Mr. Clarke of Haines Falls was driving out of Foxhall avenue to Broadway, his car collided with the Howard Winne truck. No one was injured. Mr. Clarke drove his car to Grant Dible's auto repair shop at 144 Broadway, for repairs.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Chicago, July 1.—The strike of members of the shop crafts unions on a majority of the railroads of the United States, went into effect at 10 o'clock today, in accordance with authorization given by the executives of the unions. Reports reaching here today told of thousands of men in all parts of the country laying down their tools.

Chicago, July 1.—Wage cuts aggregating approximately $134,000,000 and affecting more than 1,000,000 railway workers, went into effect on all railroads of the United States today by an order of the United States Railway Labor Board.

In protest against these wage cuts and against certain practices charged against the managements of the railroads, approximately 400,000 railway shopmen throughout the country were ordered to go on strike.

Serious interruption of freight and passenger traffic was not anticipated as the train service unions are not involved in the strike movement. The strikers come almost entirely from the ranks of repair shop employees.

Six unions of the sixteen so-called "standard" unions that comprise the railway employees' department of the American Federation of Labor, are expected to join in the strike movement. These are:

International Association of Machinists, 60,000 members; International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders and Helpers of America, 18,000 members; International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers and Helpers of America, 10,000 members; Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance, 11,000 members; International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, 12,000 members, and the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, 160,000 members. Affiliated with these unions are approximately 130,000 helpers and apprentices not listed in the above tabulation, making the total number of men involved slightly more than 400,000.

These shopcrafts went on strike this morning, led by B. M. Jewell, head of the railway employees' department of the American Federation of Labor. Jewell ended all hope of averting the strike when he refused to attend a conference of the United States Railway Labor Board with the railway executives and union chiefs at the labor board offices here. His defiance of the board's summons to attend, was joined in by members of the executive committee of the shopcrafts' unions.

Jewell's whereabouts today was something of a mystery. He was variously reported to have left Chicago and to be in conference with his advisers in a downtown hotel.

Ben W. Hooper, chairman of the labor board, which was blocked yesterday in its attempt to avert the strike by the refusal of the shopcrafts' unions to attend, awaited word today from Washington as to the next move of the government.

E. F. Grable, international president of the Brotherhood of Railway Maintenance of Way Men, sent out orders to his men early today to remain at their posts until further word is received from him. He assured the labor board yesterday that strike orders for his organization would be held in abeyance until July 3 or later.

Executives of many of the leading railroads declared that so far as the general public is concerned, "it will hardly know that a strike is on." The railroads apparently have no fear of a tie up and all trains continued to operate as usual. The rail executives indicated that they would attempt to keep their equipment in repair with such forces as they are able to recruit. The general view of the situation seemed to be that the equipment is in condition to withstand a strike of thirty to sixty days before traffic would be seriously hampered.

LITTLE IMPROVEMENTS MAKE FARM AUTOMOBILE FAR MORE EFFICIENT

It is Combination of Many Small Things That Makes Up a Satisfactory and Complete Whole.

There always seems to be some improvement that can be made on the farm auto, no matter how well equipped the car may be. These improvements are often very small matters, but it is the combination of many small improvements that makes up a satisfactory and successful whole.

Fig. 1 shows an auto clamp vise. How often does the driver mechanic (who is, after all, the only one who can run a car both economically and efficiently), need a vise while away from the garage? Generally, through lack of one at the time, only a makeshift repair can be made and these often cause extra trouble afterwards when the car is in the garage.

The safety first motto applies to the tool kit as well as the driver, writes Arthur White in the Montreal Family Herald. This kit should always be inspected before getting away with the car, especially if going any distance. The most satisfactory and the quickest way to check tools and materials is to make a list of the contents and affix it to the inside of tool box. It is an easy matter, then, to run over and check the items. This, too, is the only way to checkmate the tool borrowing fiend who pounces on your tools, borrows them and neglects to return them for weeks on end.

However, to return to the vise which is intended for light, small parts, holding them rigid while one is working on them. It is affixed to the engine and is held down by the engine head bolts. If these bolts are too short, it would be as well to secure longer ones, only taking care, when tightening them up, not to overstrain them, otherwise a broken stud results.

To make the vise two pieces of steel three-eighths or one-half inch will be needed. This is heated in the forge and then bent and formed as in the sketch, holes being drilled to fit the width of the studs. The movable section of the vise has two lugs, filed out at the bottom. These are then fitted into slots which are cut in the fixed portion. The tightening screw is made from any piece of one-half-inch bar.

fixed up to pass through the holes in the vise. This also is heated and bent as shown. Afterwards a thread is cut, and a suitable nut fitted to it.

Fig. 2 shows a method of heating the intake manifold from the exhaust manifold. This increases the efficiency of the gas in cold weather. The idea is to cover the entire manifold with a copper sheet, bending it well around each manifold and making it meet in the rear. This copper jacket is held in place by making holes through it to correspond with the bolts on the engine, slipping it over these bolts, setting the pipe clamps in place and finally tightening up the nuts as usual. The copper conducts the heat from the hot exhaust pipes direct to the intake manifold. After running the engine about ten minutes the intake becomes so hot that the hand cannot be held upon it; thus it preheats the gas, and so raises its explosive power.

Fig. 3 shows another fitting for cold weather. This consists of a box-like case for the muffler and is fastened to the underside of the floor.

The casing can be made of sheet metal or even of wood. A number of holes should be bored through the floor of the car directly above this deflector; not so close or so numerous as to weaken the floor, of course, but sufficient to permit the heat, from around the exhaust muffler, escaping into the car. This excess heat usually is lost in radiation; but, by being diverted to the interior of the car, it will add greatly to the comfort of the occupants in winter.

Another convenience when driving through snow or mist is a home-made windshield wiper. The very useful one shown in Fig. 4 is made of a piece of weather-strip (felt edge) mounted on a bent rod of spring wire. The clip is made of sheet metal fastened by means of a small bolt. On the other end of the wire, a small spool, with the flanges removed, is mounted. If the felt edge is saturated with equal parts of glycerin and alcohol it will coat the glass with an oily film, which tends to shed water.

TIRE TOOL FOR AUTOMOBILE

Device is Applicable for Both "Straight Side" and "Clincher" Types of Rims.

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing a combination automobile tire tool, the invention of F. Emmenegger of 2844 Chippewa St., St. Louis, Mo., says: The invention relates more particularly to a combined tire tool adaptable for use in taking off and replacing tires, and is applicable alike to what are known as "straight side" tires in demountable rims, and "clincher" type tires of other rims.

RIGHT AIR PRESSURE IS QUITE NECESSARY

Overloading or Underinflation Increases Temperature.

Amount of Heat Generated by Tire is Due to Flexing and Bending of Fabric and Rubber—Old Tire Most Susceptible.

The heat that is noticeable in a tire after it has been run for a few hours is generated by the tire itself, due to flexing and bending of fabric and rubber. The amount of heat depends upon the rapidity and extent of this action. An overloaded or an under-inflated tire heats more rapidly than a properly inflated and properly loaded tire. Similarly, an old tire, due to weakness, is more susceptible to this heat-producing action than a new tire.

The strength factor built into the standard pneumatic tires of today is far above what the tire is ever called upon to deliver, except under most extraordinary circumstances. Experimental tests have shown that in order to blow out a new first-class tire by additional air pressure it is necessary, to exert a force of over thirty times the regular recommended pressure.

Tire experts claim, therefore, that there is absolutely no reason, so far as a blowout is concerned, for a reduction of air pressure before going out on long runs or during hot days. The maximum increase in air pressure that could be expected, under any condition, would not exceed fifteen pounds—the average would not be greater than six pounds. This small increase in pressure will not blow out the casing.

The motorist should not concern himself over making inflation allowances for changes in temperature. The important point to remember is at all times to have enough pressure and that it is very rare that one has too much. Proper air pressure is necessary that full service may be received.

Tax Rather High.

Tax on passenger automobiles in Great Britain is $5 per horsepower. In Italy the tax for an average car runs between $2,000 and $3,000 a year.

YOU AUTO KNOW

That oil "wears out" and that it should therefore be replaced with new oil every thousand miles or so. This "wearing" process is due to the fact that some of the oil works up past the piston where it is burned up; other portions work out around the different parts of the engine and are lost, but the major portion of the oil remains in the "sump" or crank case long enough for it to become mixed with the gasoline which has been forced past the piston. In time, the addition of this gasoline thins the oil to such an extent that it has comparatively little lubricating power.

The man who wishes to get the most economical power out of his car will therefore see that the crank case is drained regularly, depending upon the temperature at which the engine is run, the grade of oil used and the fit of the piston. Ordinarily, this should be attended to every 1,000 miles and at no time should the car be driven more than 2,500 miles without attending to this important detail.

MAIL TRAIN NOW A MIXED TRAIN

Since the fruit season has set in the West Shore train that is scheduled to arrive in this city from New York at 7:20 evenings, and which brings mails, is from half an hour to over an hour late nearly every evening. The delay is said to be caused by the train stopping at various points between Marlborough and this city to pick up cars loaded with small fruits packed for shipment for the Boston market. Last week strawberries were being shipped and now the shipments are raspberries or Antwerp, and also currants. Soon the grapes will begin to be sent to the Boston market and peaches, pears and plums will follow. For a few years a fruit train was made up but since the war the railroad in order to save expense has attached the fruit cars to the 7:20 train thus making it run late and bringing denunciation on the management from the passengers anxious to reach Kingston, and from merchants who look for their evening mail which because of the delay they do not get until the next day.

Boilermakers Defeat Machinists.

Friday evening at Hasbrouck Park, the much desired baseball contest was staged between two teams composed of employees of the U. & D. Railroad shops, the machinists and the boilermakers. A large crowd of supporters assembled at the field and cheered for their favorite teams. After nine innings of good playing the boilermakers came out victorious by a 6 to 5 score. During the contest William Connors was slightly hurt and was replaced by Andrew McCauley. The battery for the boilermakers was John Long and Michael Brodhead; for the losers, Fred Williams and William Henniker.

Sold at Auction.

Robert G. Groves as referee sold at auction at noon Friday at the front door of the court house, the Felix Clare property on the easterly side of Newkirk avenue, under an interlocutory judgment of partition in which James J. Clare was plaintiff against Nellie Clare, et al., defendants. It was struck off to Milton A. Auchmoody for $800. Chris. A. Murray is attorney for the plaintiff.

Graduates From Rensselaer.

John Reeves of Hyde Park, N. Y., was a recent visitor at the home of his uncle, Benjamin Chambers, on Shufeldt street. He is a graduate of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy, class of 1922, and has accepted a position as electrical engineer with the Light, Heat and Power Company, of Hartford, Conn., where he assumed his duties today.

DEDICATE SUNDAY AT WOODSTOCK

The ceremonies attending the laying of the cornerstone of the Church of Joan of Arc at Woodstock, Sunday, will no doubt be very largely attended as many people from Kingston and surrounding sections of Woodstock will go in automobiles. The route for autos from this city is to Woodstock Lodge, formerly the Hotel Irvington, and make a turn on the highway to the right. The members of the Knights of Columbus who will attend the ceremonies laying will go by autos leaving K. of C. Hall on Broadway at 3 o'clock. The ceremonies will begin at 4 o'clock, daylight having time. The Rev. Dean John J. Hickey of St. Mary's will conduct the ceremonies assisted by the Rev. Peter H. Spellman and a number of out of town clergy will attend. There will be music by a brass band.

Lynn J. Frazier

Returns indicate that Porter J. McComb, Senator from North Dakota, was defeated in the primaries by Lynn J. Frazier, recalled by the people of that state last October as Governor.

Dance at Lake Katrine.

There will be a mid-summer dance at the Grange Hall, Lake Katrine, Thursday evening, July 6. This dance will be one of the best dances to be held at this hall this season, as the committee has secured Curt Shurtz's orchestra to furnish the music. Dances will be from 8 to 12, standard price. A large crowd from this city is anticipated.

MISS LIEBIG HEARD IN RECITAL

Another delightful pianoforte recital was given at the studio of Mr. and Mrs. Harry P. Dodge on Friday evening, the solo pupil this time being Miss Elizabeth Liebig who was assisted by Carl Pierson, basso. Miss Liebig is a young musician of talent and played her program with that poise that comes from the right kind of self consciousness; the consciousness of faithful study admirably guided, plus talent. Miss Liebig opened the program with the Mozart Sonata in A Major, and her playing of the first movement, the Andante, theme and variation, was particularly masterly. The other two movements, the Menuetto and Alla Toca were admirably played. Miss Liebig plays with ease and excellence of technique and considerable temperament in her interpretation of the music being played. The Chopin program were all good. Mazurka, op. 39, No. 2; Nocturne, op. 37, No. 2; Waltz, op. 69, No. 2; the brilliant Mazurka and graceful Waltz being the best perhaps. Miss Liebig's last group of selections were all by modern composers but she caught their spirit admirably and called forth fully deserved commendation for her performance of the "Etude Mignonne" by Schmitt; "Gavotte" by Ton Brink; and "Valse Arabesque" by Lach. The pleasing program was delightfully varied by the singing of "Oh, mein holder Abendstern," from Wagner's Tannhauser, and Schumann's "The Two Grenadiers." Though so entirely dissimilar, Mr. Pierson, whose voice is so musical in quality, sang each in a manner that afforded both real pleasure and satisfaction to his hearers.

Ellenville, July 1.—Ellenville will certainly have a great holiday week from July 3 to July 8, when the carnival and horse racing will take place. Special fireworks display the evening of the 4th. Manager G. E. Webb has certainly done things up to the queen's taste and will give everyone a good time. The bill posting has been done by the greatest bill poster ever, Charles E. Webb, and along with the circus July 12, Ellenville looks like a porous plaster.

Ellenville.

Mr. Ewing has returned to his home on Maple avenue for the season. Arthur Wright has been assisting at McMillen's news store during the illness of William Jr. The ice cream and soda business in Ellenville is fast becoming a joke. You can find a stand nearly every fifty yards. Manager Millard, of the Shadowland Theater, has the new cooling device working fine during this hot weather and the crowded houses nightly appreciate it. Gus Shaffer, chief clerk at Wagner's Hotel on Market street, has been enjoying the week at Atlantic City and the beaches. Guernsey Craft has been filling the place while Gus is away. Leo Lasher has returned home from Cornell for the summer, stopping with his parents on upper Canal street.

John Dunlop, the insurance man, caught a pickerel at Bearer Dam weighing 5 pounds 2 ounces. Mrs. J. J. Harvey has been visiting her sister on Main street. Mrs. William McMillen has just staid out the finest ice cream and soda parlors seen in Ellenville. Tracy Schoonmaker, our town clerk, moves his family today to their summer camp on Hook Hill. The Wayside Inn seems to find itself useful now. With a candy maker in the rear, lawyer and real estate, ball room, cafe and machine shop in front, it soon will be a city in itself. With much regret Ellenville parts with Father McGee, who left this week to take up his new duties in the Bronx.

Antony Reported Killed. By Telegraph to The Freeman. Moscow, July 1.—The Social revolutionary leader, Antony, has been assassinated, it was learned today. The details of his murder were not revealed. Antony was one of the best known Socialists in Russia. Although he was hostile to the principles of Bolshevism, he was allowed to remain in the country.

The first annual picnic of the uptown Hebrew school children will be held on Tuesday, Fourth of July, at 3 o'clock on the Abramowitz estate, Albany avenue.

The children of the Hebrew School and the members of both Young Judea clubs will take part in contests of running, walking, high and broad jumping, tug of war, sack races, egg and spoon races, three-legged races, blindfolded boxing, and wrestling matches.

A feature of the sports will be the fancy riding and roping contests in which the Abramowitz brothers will compete with some professional circus riders from New York. At the concluding a real horse race of one mile between five contestants will be staged.

Mrs. William Rosenthal, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, has organized a committee who will serve sandwiches, drinks, ice cream and cake to all the children of the school. Special arrangements have been made for parking of automobiles. After the show the Hebrew School children will be taken for a ride. The affair will be run under the auspices of Young Judea and the proceeds will go to the Jewish Center. Mr. Abramowitz has given the use of his land for this picnic free of charge. Morris Clark has full charge of the picnic.

R R WAGE RECORD.

It needs no citation of records to answer the statement quoted from Samuel Gompers that "the railroad worker waited until July 20, 1920, for an increase in wages" and that "the railroad workers had been compelled to bear this increase in cost of living without any compensating wage increase." The whole country remembers the Adamson Act of 1916, passed by Congress under threat of a nation-wide railroad strike, the chief if not the sole purpose of which was an increase in railroad wages.

From 1915 to 1920 the average wages of rail employees increased about 95 per cent while the cost of living had increased slightly less. By the close of 1920 railroad workers were receiving 136 per cent more than in 1915 while the cost of living had gone up but 120 per cent. The general public has been familiar with the railroad wage question ever since the passage of the Adamson Act. There was not then and is not now any public opposition to the payment of adequate wages to rail employees, but there was then and still is a decided opposition to coercion under the threat of precipitating a national catastrophe.

The public wants rail employees well paid, but it also wants a fair adjustment of wage payments. The farmer, the miner, and the consumer in general help pay railroad wages, and they resent paying a scale unreasonably out of line with the income of men in other lines of industry who must be losers if rail employees are gains through favoritism.

Certain it is that the McAdoo regime did not increase the incomes of railroads at the same time or in the same degree that it increased their expenses. It is also certain that railroad wages did not come down at the same time wages in other lines were reduced. Whether the cuts ordered by the Railroad Labor Board were exactly right or not, no layman can say, but it is safe to assert that the Board is in a better position to determine that question than is anyone else. Since the government fixes freight and passenger rates, it must have some control over railroad expenses, else the roads will go bankrupt.

It is not to be hoped that any commission or board will do absolute justice in any case. That is beyond the possibility of human infirmity. But certain it is that a nearer approach to justice will be attained if the adjudication be left to a board than if left to the railroad employees, the railroad employers, or the final compromises of a disastrous strike. Every other line of business has suffered defeat; the railroad employees cannot hope to be an exception.

The cut in wages has been ordered by a legal tribunal in accordance with law. Experience has shown and will continue to show that the American people are believers in observance of due process of law. Anarchy is the only other outcome.

THE CABINET IN CONGRESS.

By his publicly expressed approval President Harding has given impetus to the proposal that the members of his Cabinet, heads of executive departments, shall occupy seats on the floor of the two houses of Congress and be subject to interrogation by Senators and Representatives. The object in view is closer co-operation between the executive and legislative branches of the government in order to secure greater efficiency in the conduct of public affairs. It is believed that the proposed system would simplify the relations between the law-making body and the officers charged with the execution of the laws by bringing about direct contact in lieu of the present round-about and indirect methods of communication.

The plan is not new and, in fact, is a measure a return to methods in vogue in the early days of the American republic. The present proposition is a revival of one debated seriously in 1864 and again in 1881, when George H. Pendleton, first as a Representative and then as a Senator from Ohio, strongly advocated the change. The subject was brought forward again in 1913, when the Pendleton reports of 1864 and 1881 were reprinted as public documents for the information of Congress. The same statesman's married at West Hurley.

arguments for affirmative action in this connection are once more being depended upon to interest and convince Congressmen. There is no serious objection to the proposition and there is much to be said in its favor, for Congress is in constant need of information which the Cabinet members, heads of departments, alone can supply promptly and completely.

What do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Department of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed and stamped envelope for reply.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. What do trout eat?
2. Why does the white patch around a prong-horn antelope's tail show more at times than at others?
3. How can I keep my collection of bird's nests from falling apart? They seem to loosen and lose their shape.

Answers In Monday's Nature Notes.

Answers To Previous Questions.

1. Though it may seem a foolish question, I want to know if there is such a thing as a snake charmer? In India, there appear to be individuals able to handle poisonous snakes without being bitten. The theory is that these persons are without fear and control the snakes. Many "charmers" probably manage their exhibits by having specimens with the poison fangs withdrawn, or by showing snakes that are torpid from feeding, and sluggish anyway in the day-time. In such zoological collections as we know, the snake keepers use caution in handling snakes, and do not attempt any "charming."

2. How large do prairie dog towns grow?

At least one dog "town" is on scientific record as covering approximately 25,000 miles. The inhabitants were estimated at 4 million dogs. These towns are a network of underground tunneling, some burrows going down 15 feet. The mouth of the shaft usually has a rim around it of hard-packed dirt, thrown up in tunneling. This keeps water from draining into the hole.

3. Do meadowlarks migrate in winter?

In some locations, yes; but they are resident in others. This question came from Oregon—the western meadowlark is resident in Oregon and Washington, and in the Pacific region generally south of 39 degrees. It is believed that some locations where the bird is seen all the year round, are really not populated by the "same" individuals, though the species is represented constantly. The summer meadowlarks probably move a little further south for the winter, and the winter residents are individuals that have come down from a more northerly summer home.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

A Popular One Piece Dress.

3872—Here is a splendid style for modeling or for combining two materials. The lines are good and youthful, and new style features are seen in collar and sleeve. Satin or tulle would be attractive for this design with soutache braid or embroidery for trimming. It would also be nice in black velvet with braiding, or in taupe more with a touch of coral.

The pattern is cut in 3 sizes: 16, 18 and 20 years. A 16 year size requires 4 1/2 yards of 36 inch material. The width of the skirt at the foot is about 2 yards.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

ALUMNI DANCE ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

Blair Muller is Elected President and the Remaining Officers Approved Themselves—Past Year a Successful One.

The annual summer dance of the Alumni Association was held Friday evening at St. Mary's School Hall.
Approximately seventy-five couples were present. Music for the occasion was furnished by the Imperial orchestra.

During the evening the annual meeting of the association was held,
at which time officers were elected for the coming year. The association is composed of the alumni of the two former academies and Kingston High School. After the business meeting there was short intermission, during which the members of the many graduated classes renewed old acquaintances and enjoyed refreshments.

At the meeting, after the reports of the treasurer and secretary were read and approved, Blair Muller,
the successful president of the class of '22, was elected president of the Alumni Association. By a motion, the remaining officers of this year were re-elected. The officers for the coming year are: President, Blair Muller, class of '22, K. H. S.; vice president, Miriam I. Pitts, class of
'19, re-elected; secretary, Marion L.
ident, Miriam I. Pitts, class of '19,
re-elected; secretary, Marion L.
Kingman, class of '19, re-elected; treasurer, Edwin L. Greene, class of
'19, re-elected.

The past year has been a very successful one with Mr. Dana as the efficient leader for the association, and Mr. Muller's record as president of this year's senior class indicates an equally successful one for the association the coming year.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

GEESSE AND DUCKS

"There are lots of us here," said Mrs. Goose.

"Lots of us," said Mr. Goose, who was better known as Mr. Gander.

"Plenty of us, too, quack, quack," said Mrs. Duck.

"And a goodly number of us, quack, quack," said Mr. Duck, also known as Mr. Drake.

"Well," said Mr. Black Mallard, "we do not quack in the same fine way as our ladies do, but we make another little kind of a sound which is something like a quack and something like a sound the name of which is known only to us."

"That is, we can make our own sounds in a very superior fashion."

"Ah, yes," said Mrs. Goose. "Well, well, I hear they're building a fine place for Mr. Orange-Tan, who is expected to arrive at the zoo or the menagerie or the animal home or whatever you wish to call our park."

"Yes, and they're going to make it very beautiful. Carpenters and painters and workmen are busy each day and they make a great noise, so they should be doing fine things."

"We make a great noise and surely we do fine things."

"Surely we do," the others said.

"There's a fine fountain over yonder, which I've been admiring," said Mrs. Duck. "I have often enjoyed watching it. Water spouts to me are more beautiful than land sights."

"You will see that it is a gushing, rushing, spurting kind of a fountain that I'm telling you about, which I see and which you can all see too."

"It bounces up and water spouts forth, and then it goes down and then it comes up again and it does this all the time, over and over and over again."

"It's a most fascinating thing to watch. Most interesting."

"There's a nice big hanging nest up in this place of ours. Yes, we have fine little ones too."

"But I must not talk any more until I have shaken my mouth in the water and have made it good and wet."

"I shall drink it so you will almost be able to see me swallow it."

Then they all began to drink water.

"Looked Their Best."

and put their heads "way down into the water, as did all the wild fowl, as they were called.

They made a great deal of noise all the time and squeaked and clucked steadily.

Some people came and watched the geese and the ducks and the ducks and the more they were watched the more they talked, hoping that the people could understand all that they said.

But after a time the people left and Mrs. Duck said:

"Quack, quack, I know what it is. They're going to see the squirrels who go back and forth in their cage on a wheel-like thing they have to play with."

"The squirrels are with the head keeper and they love to play on this wheel and go around and make it go faster and faster and faster."

"Then there is a new Rhesus Monkey from India and he is receiving attention. He's quite a friendly soul, too. I've been told."

"And the keeper is much pleased because his little pet Ring-Tailed monkey is getting all over the trouble he had with his teeth and he is with the keeper in his office and is allowed to sit on a rug on the floor and eat fine things."

"Oh, he is quite free to walk about the office as he pleases. Yes, the people will see all these creatures."

"But let us make as much noise as we can so we will have all the visitors possible and so they will come to see us."

So the Geese and the Ducks and the Swans all made a great deal of noise and many people did come to see them and they preened their feathers and washed their beaks and looked their best for all who gazed upon them.

The Lion's Share.

The scene was in a school classroom and the subject was Scripture.

The teacher had just been reading the story of Daniel in the lions' den.

"Now, Tommie," she said, "what do we learn from the story of Daniel in the lions' den?"

Tommie did not know, but Jackie was all eagerness to tell.

"Well, Jackie," said the mistress to her favorite pupil, smiling at the child's brightness. "What lesson do we learn?"

"That we shouldn't eat everything we see."

I have known a vast quantity of nonsense talked about had men not looking in the face. Don't trust that idea. Dishonesty will stare honesty out of countenance any day in the week, if there is anything to be got by it.—Dickens.

THE PIQUANT MINT

Mint as a flavoring occupies a very conspicuous place in the cuisine of many households. A mint sauce to serve with lamb and as a pungent garnish to an beef drink, the mint is exhausted.

Where one may pick it in the garden the temptation is to use it in too large quantities. A drop or two in a dish will suffice to make a dish especially tempting.

In selecting mint, it is well to remember that peppermint has a purplish stem, while the spearmint has a green one.

Mint Sauce.—Take twelve stalks of spearmint, wash and chop the leaves very fine. Add one tablespoonful of sugar and one-half cupful of vinegar. Allow the mixture to stand an hour before serving.

Mint Sherbet.—Take the juice of three lemons, two cupfuls of sugar and one quart of rich milk. Peel the yellow rind, or grate the rind from two lemons, add 20 stalks of bruised spearmint and cover with boiling water; cover tightly and let stand ten minutes. Strain and cool and add to the lemon, sugar and milk; freeze as usual; serve in sherbet glasses, garnished with a small sprig of mint.

Mint Blanc Manger.—Soak six tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water for five minutes. Bring to a boil one quart of milk, then add five tablespoonfuls of cream; add this to the softened gelatin, stirring constantly. When partly cooled add three or four drops of peppermint. Mold and serve with sweetened whipped cream.

Peppermint Patties.—Take two cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of water and two tablespoonfuls of corn syrup; boil to the soft-ball stage; set away to cool in the pan. When still warm, add a few drops of peppermint, a bit of green for coloring, and beat with a wooden spoon until creamy. Drop by spoonfuls on a waxed paper.

The fondant may be poured out carefully on a buttered platter and allowed to cool, then stir until creamy. Care should be taken that no grains which may have formed on the sides of the pan are scraped off into the mixture, as that is apt to ruin the whole.

Distinction Not Always Britain's

Daniel Webster spoke of Great Britain as a power dotting the possessions of the earth with military posts, keeping march with the sun and "circling the earth with one continuous and unbroken strain of the martial airs of England." But it was not always so, for in 1648, the Englishman Gage wrote: "It is said of the Hollanders that the sun never sets on their dominions." And the doughty Capt. John Smith asked: "Why should the brave Spanish soldier brag, the sun never sets on Spanish dominions?" And in 1500, Guarini referred to Catherine of Austria as the monarch to whom the sun never sets. Schiller quotes Don Carlos in the German play as asserting that "The sun, in my dominions, never sets." And Sir Walter Scott asserted, "The sun never sets on the immense empire of Charles V."

How to Make and Use It By A. HYATT VERRILL

XX. REGENERATIVE RECEIVING SET

A regenerative set is one in which the wireless waves or oscillations entering from the aerial are regenerated and increased by means of the vacuum bulb and for this reason, as well as on account of others, it is far superior to any style of crystal set. A vacuum bulb or tube detector is about thirty times as efficient as the best crystal detector and moreover, with such sets, one or more steps of amplification may be used, thus increasing the sounds to almost any extent. One of the great advantages of regenerative sets is that they will permit of tuning out interferences and the better the set and the more efficient the various units the clearer and better the results obtained. I have already described how to set up a small regenerative set under "coils," but there are various other methods of arranging or assembling regenerative sets. One of the best is the set used with a variocoupler and variometers which is illustrated in Fig. 35. By using two variometers and a variocoupler as shown, great selectivity of the circuit is obtained and by hooking on amplifiers and using a loud speaker phone, music, songs, speeches, etc., may be reproduced as loudly as a good phonograph. The only objection to such a set is that there are several adjustments to be made in tuning as there are the three knobs to look after. In making this set it is not advisable to attempt to make either the variocoupler or the variometers, for while these instruments look simple, special tools and long practice and skill are required to construct them properly. Also, when purchasing these, select those in which the coils are not varnished or shellacked as these coverings invariably decrease the efficiency of a coil. The other parts required, aside from ordinary insulated electric bell wire, binding posts and a panel or base, are the vacuum bulb or tube detector; the socket for the tube, a grid-leak and condenser (which you can readily make yourself if desired), the rheostat, a variable condenser of .0005 mfd.; the six volt storage battery; B-battery and a pair of 2000 ohm receivers.

By studying the diagram, you will easily see how the set should be arranged and hooked up, but, if you desire, the wires may be altered to run at other angles or directions, the main thing being to keep them as short and direct as possible and to avoid running them parallel or crossing them. The aerial A is led in and connected to the primary of the variocoupler B, the other terminal of the variocoupler being connected with the variable condenser C and the latter being connected with the ground-wire D. From the secondary coil of the variocoupler E, one wire is led to the phone or receivers, F, a connection being made at G, with the storage battery H and the rheostat I. The other wire from E, is led to the grid-variometer J, thence to the grid-leak and condenser K, then to the vacuum-tube grid L. The plate-connection of the tube M, is wired to the plate-variometer N, and from here the wire runs to the B-battery O, the other terminal of which leads to the phone-receivers, F.

The whole affair, when finally connected and mounted on a neat bakelite or fibre base, should be enclosed in a neat case with a hinged cover, in order to protect the instruments from dust and disturbance and yet allow inspection or adjustment. Of course the adjusting or tuning knobs and the outside connections for aerial, ground and batteries should be led through the case or box to binding posts on the exterior. If the whole set is arranged compactly and neatly and you make an attractive, well finished case, the set will be the equal in appearance, as well as in efficiency, of any ready-made set costing several times as much.

What Chile Is Like

View of Santiago, Chile.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Chile, whose diplomats are in conference in Washington with those of Peru in an effort to solve the Tacna-Arica problem, might be called "the South American California." It is long and narrow, and its region of greatest development and population is a great, rich valley with low mountains separating it from the coast, and with a steep, snow-capped range towering above it to the east.

Chile is the longest and narrowest of all the countries of the world. It stretches 2,700 miles, from Cape Horn to the deserts of Tarapaca and Tacna, within the tropics. Its width is rarely more than 125 miles from the ocean to the Andean crest. If we were to place it upon a similar stretch of coast in North America, it would cover Lower California, California, Oregon, Washington, and British Columbia to the St. Elias district of Alaska.

Chile is divided into three sections by the natural features of the Pacific slope of the Andes. The northern is that of the semi-arid and desert region, which reaches from Peru southward to Valparaiso. It is an utter desert in the north and becomes less inhospitable toward the south. It is traversed from the Andes to the coast by short, deep valleys, separated by high spurs of the mountains, and communication from north to south has always been exceedingly difficult. Nevertheless, the Chilean engineers found a route by which to extend the state railway which links Puerto Montt, in a latitude comparable to that of New York, with Pisagua in the territories conquered from Peru, which has a latitude comparable to that of Mexico City.

Heart of the Country.

The central section of Chile extends through nine degrees of latitude for a distance of about 600 miles from Valparaiso to the island of Chiloe, south of Puerto Montt. This is the heart of Chile, the only portion of the country which can support a sufficient population to constitute a nation. The area is not large, about 100,000 square miles, and much of it is occupied by mountain ranges of great height and ruggedness.

But between the Andes and the coast range there extends in this section a valley similar to that of California, which is the seat of the Chilean people. Many rivers rising in the Andes descend to and meander more or less directly westward through the coast range of the Pacific; but the intervening divides are nowhere of such altitude as to interrupt the continuity of the great valley that extends from north to south. Santiago is situated at its northern end, and flourishing cities are located at each favorable point on the railway that connects the capital with Puerto Montt.

The climate as we go from north to south becomes ever more humid, and we pass from the irrigated lands about Santiago to the dense forest swamps of the southern portion of the district. While much of the land has been cleared or is in the process of clearing, in a state which reminds one of our own Pacific coast 30 years ago, other areas remain impenetrable forests, still unexplored after nearly 400 years of occupation of the country.

The third section of Chile, extending southward from Puerto Montt through 14 degrees of latitude to Cape Horn, is like our southern Alaskan coast—a stretch of islands and peninsulas broken by intricate channels and profound fjords that penetrate far into the land. Tumbiuous rivers descend from the Andes and debouch into the fjords in swampy deltas which are covered with dense forests.

The large island of Chiloe, which was conquered by Valdivia before the middle of the sixteenth century, is well populated and occupies a position with reference to the more frequented northern coast similar to that which Vancouver island holds to San Francisco. Farther south the population becomes very scanty, glaciers descend from the Andean heights, and the savage but majestic scenery of the channel and the straits of Magellan suggests that of the inland passage and a canal of the Alaskan coast.

When Chile Expanded.

It is the extreme northern portion of Chile as shown by the maps that is now the center of interest. Chile did not always have a length of 2,700 miles. Until the last quarter of the past century, the northern boundary of the country fell more than 300 miles short of its present position. North of it Bolivia owned a coastal strip 200 miles or more in length, and Peru's southern border extended some 300 miles farther south than it does today. All of this region, which now forms the northernmost 300 miles of Chile, was considered of little worth, and much of it had not been explored.

When extensive nitrate deposits were discovered in the Bolivian portion of the coastal strip in the sixties, there was a rush like that to California's gold fields in 1849. A large proportion of the newcomers were Chileans. Friction arose between Chilean mining companies and Bolivian tax collectors, and finally in 1879 war broke out between Chile and Bolivia. Peru was drawn in as an ally of Bolivia, and the three-cornered war ran on for several years. At its conclusion Chile was completely victorious and extended her boundaries at the expense of the two vanquished countries. Bolivia became "the Switzerland of America" in a double sense: it is not only perched high among mountains, but by the loss of its Pacific provinces it became completely landlocked. This mountain country has attempted in recent years to buy from Chile a "corridor" to the sea.

Since the war of the Pacific, as it was called, Peru has had toward Chile the relations which Italy held toward Austria in the late Nineteenth and early Twentieth centuries. Tacna and Arica have constituted its "Peru Irredenta," and all its leaders have dreamed of restoring the lost provinces.

Economically, Chile has profited greatly by the war of the Pacific. Out of the former Peruvian province of Tarapaca and the former Bolivian province of Atacama (now the Chilean Antofagasta) have been taken since the war nitrates worth many millions of dollars, and much remains to be extracted. Valuable deposits of nitrate have come to light, too, in Tacna since the war. The export tax on nitrates supplies nearly three-fourths of the income of the government. Incidentally, in Tacna is one of the few areas along this desert portion of the coast capable of producing crops, and the section is therefore of great strategic value. These are some of the complex factors which make the Tacna-Arica problem much more than a mere question whether a plebiscite shall be held to assign the region permanently to either Peru or Chile.

Santiago the Capital.

Santiago is the chief city of Chile, but not in the same degree as Buenos Aires is of the Argentine republic. Buenos Aires has become almost the republic itself, in the sense that Paris is France; but Santiago is but the capital of the country, which has other cities that may compare with it in local importance. Santiago contrasts with Buenos Aires as the conservative capital of a small country with the metropolis of the continent. You feel in the Chilean capital the conservative character of the people; in Buenos Aires the liberal spirit of the world city.

Valdivia and his successors, the invaders of Chile in the sixteenth century, were soldiers bent solely on conquest, such as they had taken part in Peru, for immediate gain; whereas, the colonists who in successive expeditions founded Buenos Aires came with wives and children, with horses, mares, and implements of husbandry, to settle in the land. Thus there was a marked difference between Chile and Argentina from the beginning.

The warring invaders of Chile met and mingled with a warlike Indian race, the Araucanians, and their issue is without question the most independent, the boldest, the most aggressive of South American peoples.

Fighting Weeds. In sections of the Northwest the fruit growers cover the fields with roofing paper, cutting out round holes for the melon hills. It has been found that by this practice all weeds are smothered and there is a big saving in labor for cultivation and irrigation.

SHAWL, PARIS FAD

Spanish Shoulder Decoration Attracts Attention to Gown.

Noted Dressmaker Strains the Japanese Note in Exquisite Outfit for Formal Wear.

The Spanish shawl has brought out an entirely new type of evening dress which is nothing more than a simple crepe de chine, low neck, sleeveless robe which matches the shawl in color. There is nothing more lovely being worn in all Paris at the present time, says a writer in the New York Tribune, than this type of dress, a fad, as it were, among chic women who wish to attract attention by their striking clothes. When wearing such a costume one looks like a brilliant-hued tropical flower or a bird of rare plumage.

Recently at a fashionable restaurant in Paris a charming outfit of this kind was seen. A beautiful red-haired girl wore a vivid empire green crepe de chine dress and Spanish shawl. The shawl was embroidered in enormous peonies in dahlia shades, covering a range from the beautiful dahlia pinks down to a deep clematis blue. This, in contrast with the vivid green of the foundation, made indeed a brilliant spot of color. The woman wore a chain of silver beads, braided through her auburn tresses.

Another restaurant gown in burnt orange crepe de chine had an extremely low neck, sleeveless bodice and draped skirt. It was entirely without trimming and had a matching Spanish shawl, this embroidered in the most vivid colors with deep fringe having knotted ends.

It is to Paul Poiret, the eccentric though admittedly talented Parisian dressmaker, that fashion owes some of her more remarkable turns. Just now M. Poiret distinguishes himself by emphasizing the Japanese note.

At a recent ball given in connection with the dressmaking trade of Paris a Poiret mannequin wore an exquisite dress decidedly Japanese in effect, with her coiffeur a la Japonaise and her face made up to resemble a Japanese masque. The dress was developed from black satin, silver fringe and a gorgeous silver brocade, on which there were Japanese flowers in natter blue and rose.

DRESS AND CHIC OVERBLOUSE

The feature of this charming outfit, worn by a popular film favorite, is the pointed overblouse. Note the buttons under the arm.

SMART RIBBON BOWS ON HATS

Colored Strands Supply Simple and Attractive Trimming; Black Shapes Preferred.

Wide ribbon made into loops and ends or tied in very smart bows of good size, is making the trimming for many of the hats shown for immediate wear. Black shapes particularly show the preference for the bow trim and models of hair, malines braid and, of course, milan, are used for this purpose.

In using these wide ribbons it is noticed that the hanging end is still employed, in some cases the ribbon reaching almost to the waistline at the side. Many of the large shapes in joke effect that have the new cut-off back trim, employ the ribbon to fill in this space with a long soft bow reaching far out on each side. In other cases, when a shape is raised slightly at the back, the ribbon loop or bow may be placed on the underside of the brim well toward the back.

Gray Umbrellas.

In contrast with the bright-hued umbrellas of the moment is a new demure umbrella in fashionable gray tones. The cover is of dove gray silk and the handle is of gray bakelite hand-etched in black and white. Frame, tips and ferrule are of silver. Nothing could be daintier or more elegant than this silver-trimmed gray silk umbrella, and because of its very quietness of tone it is a conspicuous asset of the costume on a rainy day.

Bells and Their Tone.

The tone in many old bells can be accounted for only by their age. After a bellmaker determined that after a century the clapper and the surface of the bell fitted exactly, he cast them in a form giving considerable

MAZE OF MODISH FOOTWEAR

Great Array of New Styles for Women of All Ages and for Various Occasions.

For the last two years footwear has played an increasingly prominent role in the mode, growing ever more elaborate until the present season discovers in every shop such a multiplicity of trimmings and such unusual combinations of colors and materials that the woman of taste and caution finds herself forced to watch her step lest she lose her way in this elaborate maze.

For example, she now selects as a walking shoe for town wear either an entirely plain or simply trimmed oxford shoe with a medium heel, or the slightly more elaborate type of shoe—a low street shoe of black patent leather and gray suede, with elastic inserts and high patent leather Spanish heels. Another walking shoe of the more conservative type is an oxford of suede and patent leather with a broad, low, suede-covered heel. Heels of varied types are seen among the street shoes, including the leather box heel, very broad and low, the familiar Cuban heel, and finally the slender Spanish heel, which is a fraction lower than the French heel.

For the afternoon, simple slippers of suede or patent leather with steel buckles are the favorites of the woman who seeks distinction in dress, and they bid fair to displace the ubiquitous strapped sandal. These slippers of distinction seek the softer tones of suede to harmonize with frocks of the fashionable colors. Gray, beige and black are set off with steel buckles, while brown suede is combined with a buckle of bronzed steel. Black patent leather is extremely smart for the afternoon, particularly when it is simply made and set off with a colonial buckle, or an ornament of cut-steel heading. The slipper that is worn for formal afternoon occasions is invariably accompanied by the high, slender French heel.

That Pathetic Bachelor.

"Do you see much of that pathetic class of over-ripe bachelor my boy rather naughtily calls the 'Have-beens'? They are common, I suppose, to every age and country, but England seems to contain more than her fair share. Between thirty-five and fifty, not particularly well-connected, not even extravagantly popular, but useful—apparently—and ubiquitous I understand they belong to the usual clubs, most of them dance quite competently; all of them play extremely good bridge. I am told, several women I know make out a stop-gap list of them; then, if you're short of a man, the butler can telephone to them in turn until he finds one disengaged. Delightfully simple, is it not? Having no personalities of their own, they accord well with everyone; having no pride, they never resent an eleventh-hour invitation. They seem to ask nothing more of life than invitations and more invitations—and this strange modern privilege of being 'Bunny' and 'Chris' and 'Theo' to women who are old enough to have outgrown such nonsense."—From "The Confessions of a Well-Meaning Woman," by Stephen McKenna.

Negroes Came Before Pilgrims. Twenty negroes were brought to America in 1619. So the negro has been an American one year longer than the Pilgrim.

SHERIFF AGAIN VISITS CARNIVAL

Another Flak Concessionaire At Saugerties In Trouble After Complaint By Minister's Wife.

Sheriff Kells, Deputy Sheriff Jocelyn, Sergeant James Cunningham and State Trooper Dutcher motored to Saugerties, Friday afternoon, where a Jap roller board, balls and a tally sheet used were seized at the Fink carnival grounds, on complaint of Mrs. Schaefer, wife of the minister of the Reformed Church, and the operator of the game was arrested. He with two keepie dolls and a watch that are given as prizes were taken before Justice of the Peace Harry D. Abel. There the man arrested pleaded not guilty through his attorney and gave bail in $250 for his appearance on July 7, the date set for a hearing. There have been complaints made that some of the concessionaires of the carnival were running gambling games and the Rev. Dennisson and the Rev. Mr. Schaefer of Saugerties have been quietly at work trying to secure evidence to prove the truth of the complaints.

PORT EWEN BOY KILLED BY AUTO

Friday afternoon Ross Sheldon Ellsworth, 10 years old, ran out from behind a wagon in Port Ewen, and was struck by the touring car driven by Nicholas Spinnewer and fatally injured. The lad was hurried to the office of Dr. George Ross who immediately took him to the Kingston City Hospital where he died of his injuries about 6 o'clock.

Those who witnessed the accident state that it was unavoidable. As the lad ran in front of the car Mr. Spinnewer applied his brakes and tried to steer his car to one side. The boy was struck and several of his ribs were broken puncturing his lungs.

The boy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ellsworth of Port Ewen. The remains were later taken to the family home.

DE VALERA GOES ON WITH FIGHT

Claims Civil War in Progress in Many Parts of Free State—Holds Hotel in Dublin With Collins Trying to Minimize Bloodshed.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Dublin, July 1. (Noon).—There has been a great spectacular spread of the Irish civil war, with fighting in progress in many parts of the Irish Free State, according to claims issued today by Eamon de Valera, the Irish leader, from his headquarters at the Gresham Hotel.

De Valera claimed that the Free State is under attack by Republican forces at Listowel, Foyens, Skibbereen, Abbeyside, New Castle, West Broadford, Helling and Charleville.

Irregulars, blew up a railway bridge south of Drogheda, cutting railway traffic between Belfast and the south.

Dublin, July 1.—Eamon de Valera was the only Republican chieftain of importance at liberty today. De Valera is in command of a detachment of irregulars who occupied and fortified the Gresham Hotel. While the irregulars have captured Roderick O'Connell, commander-in-chief of the rebels, and have disbanded the rebels from the ruins of the Four Courts Building, there still exist squads of irregulars holding buildings in various parts of the city.

Rebel machine guns still command most of O'Connell street. The irregulars have occupied Granville and Humman Hotels, mounting machine guns on the roofs. The rebels had cut doors through the walls of the houses in O'Connell street between Parnell Monument and Marlborough street, transforming the buildings into one continuous blockhouse.

At 7 o'clock this morning, a number of armored cars drew up before De Valera's stronghold, but did not open fire. In fact, there was little shooting early in the day.

It was generally believed that the Free Staters could dislodge the Republicans from all their strongholds at their pleasure, but Collins wanted to get his enemies to surrender. If possible, to avoid further bloodshed.

Superintendent Myers of the Dublin fire department, after examining the ruins of the Four Courts Building, said that there were still large amounts of ammunition under the debris which might explode at any moment. The whole structure had been mined and was doomed from the first outbreak of fighting.

He added three firemen were hurt today while trying to extinguish the fire in the ruins.

According to word from Cork, General O'Leary, one of the chief leaders of the irregulars in County Cork, has resigned his command.

Richard Mulcahy, minister of defense in the Irish provisional government, issued another statement to the Regular army today, declaring that the government is going to see the campaign to a successful conclusion.

General O'Duffy, chief of staff of the Free State army, has issued a warning that looters will be shot on sight. Furthermore, drastic action is threatened against Republican sympathizers who attempt to aid the irregulars while working in guise of Red Cross nurses.

There has been no official information regarding the fate of "Rory" O'Connor and Liam Mellows, but it is believed that they were tried before a military court.

Where the beautiful Four Courts Building stood 48 hours ago are now a pile of smoking ruins. The dome has fallen in and the blackened walls testify to the severity of the fighting. It is now officially admitted by the war office that the explosion Friday afternoon which wrecked the structure, was caused by a rebel mine.

The Free Staters captured 170 rebels when the Four Courts position fell. It is reported that John Robinson, of County Tipperary, and John Moyland, of Cork, who had been fighting with the rebels in Dublin, have escaped and are making their way through south Ireland in an effort to stir up rebellion.

Advices from Cork say that the situation there has become quiet, but the insurgents are commandeering buildings and supplies.

All the rebel prisoners were confined in the Mount Joy jail where political prisoners were formerly incarcerated.

HERRIN SHIELDS ITS MURDERERS

Inhabitants of "Bloody Williamson" In Conspiracy of Silence—None Told of Slaughter by Strikers.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Herrin, Ill., July 1.—A conspiracy of silence, unparalleled in American criminal history, exists today in "bloody Williamson" county.

It is a conspiracy to shield from punishment every guilty participant in the dreadful massacre of nine days ago when at least a score of strike-breakers were slaughtered.

Some local authorities "conservatively" estimate the number slain at about forty.

So far but one effort to apprehend the guilty is in prospect. This is a grand jury investigation which is to be started at Marion, the county seat, after the July term of circuit court is begun on the tenth of this month. It is purely a county investigation.

The state of Illinois has taken no steps to definitely fix the responsibility for the massacre. Neither has the national government.

Although it is certain that hundreds of men in the county know who did the actual slaying, no one will talk. In "bloody Williamson" county, the recent slaughter of lives is regarded as a "lesson" not to be soon forgotten by the enemies of union coal miners. Moreover, it is generally referred to as a closed "incident."

Black secrets in the hearts of many men in the county will never be revealed, it is predicted unless some unexpected and astounding development shall occur.

The community is "mum." No one, even the innocent who may know the guilty, dare talk.

Even the ministry is silent. "We are afraid to talk under the penalty of death," a prominent minister, who took part in the burial ceremonies of the victims, admitted when asked for an interview.

"Please don't mention my name in your despatches," he pleaded, was so crushed over the tragic happenings that he planned to leave town, but has persuaded to remain on the plea that he had real work to do in the blood stained community.

For 25 years, lawlessness has been rampant in "bloody Williamson." First it was feuds—the Kentuckians had come across the border and settled in southern Illinois and, incidentally, settled in their own unique way, their troubles. One way was the taking of men from their churches on Sunday morning and shooting them.

Then came the great coal boom, when towns like Herrin, Carterville, West Frankfort, Ziegler and Johnson City, sprang up like the frontiers of the old "wild and woolly west." Williamson county today is not unlike the old wild west.

All these coal towns have the same common characteristics. They are highly organized by miners. Every working man—and woman—for that matter, is union. Each town has its large element of foreigners. The towns are young. They all have their illicit booze. Herrin is said to have twenty-seven saloons. Booze is as easily obtainable as groceries.

Competitions among the bootleggers in the county is so keen that price cuts have been forced. Crime has been rampant in "bloody Williamson" for years, particularly in Zeigler and west Frankfort.

The people live in good looking homes. The communities look prosperous. The miners made big money in recent years and they are noted spenders.

They have their own code, they bar negroes, they "run them out" during strike trouble of other days. The agricultural counties nearby, however, hire many colored persons.

Men value their lives in this rugged atmosphere as well as others. Those who "know something" concerning the massacre, realize that reckless conversation on their part will surely mean slow music and flowers. The local authorities know the same thing. The most official in this part of Illinois has said derogatory to the massacre participants was that it was a "deplorable" thing.

None of them have really tried to penetrate the conspiracy of silence, and it is safe to say none of them ever will.

BOOM IRWIN FOR GOVERNOR

Ulster and Greene Counties Back Movement Says Poughkeepsie Evening Star—Lining Up Delegates for Democratic Convention in Syracuse.

The Poughkeepsie Evening Star says: "Ulster and Greene counties have started a boom for Roscoe Irwin of Kingston for the gubernatorial nomination on the Democratic ticket. His name, it is stated, will be presented at convention to be held at Syracuse in September. The supporters of Mr. Irwin have been working hard to line up the delegates to the convention, for to fight to assumed considerable proportions."

Greene county is said to be solid for Mr. Irwin and committees are now being formed in every county in the state to back the boom and to go on the convention floor to fight to finish for his nomination. Mr. Irwin was formerly collector of internal revenue at Albany.

In Greene county, Thomas O'Hara, Lee F. Reus, Edward Silberstein and George Van Valkenburg are heading the Irwin forces and have pledged the solid support of that county to the former collector of internal revenue. It is said:

Ulster county is where the boom started and the Irwin forces in that county are headed by County Judge Jenkins, Senator Rice, Holt Winfield, John T. Loughran, William G. Merritt and Captain Everett Fowler.

The forces lined up for the nomination of Mr. Irwin are those who have opposed to the first the candidacy of William R. Hearst and they are prepared to take up the fight in every county in the state prior to the convention.

PLAYED GAME BY FIREFLY LIGHT

All Sorts of Stunts Happen at One of Most Unusual Games in Mountain
League—Hit Deer for a Circuit
Clout—Roadboy's Trained Fire-flies.

"Talking about unusual ball games," said the Old Fan, "the most unusual one I ever saw was that staged one night between the Gallupers and the Arrow Brothers in the Mountain League."

"Ball game at night," interrupted the Young Fan. "I did not know they had electric lights in the mountains when that league was playing."

"There are a lot of things you don't know," retorted the Old Fan,
"but for your information I would say that it is true they had no electrically lighted ball park, but they had Captain Ralph Roadboy's famous trained fireflies."

"I may have mentioned it before," continued the Old Fan, "but anyway Roadboy had been breeding fireflies for a number of years in the hope of being able to raise a larger variety, and one that would emit considerably more light than the ordinary firefly seen at night hereabouts."

"It is hardly needless to say that he was successful, and so when there was some talk of staging an unusual stunt in the Mountain League it was suggested that the game be played at night and the field lighted by Roadboy's fireflies.
The details were soon arranged and I was there the evening the game was played."

"Take it from me, when Road-boy's army of fireflies invaded the diamond and circled around it they emitted such a strong effulgent glow that the field was like daylight, and there were no strong rays from the sun to interfere with the players' eyesight."

"Well, the game was started and it was some game. It strung along for eight innings with neither side scoring a run. The illumination furnished by the fireflies was ideal and every play could be followed easily. Both spectators and players were delighted with the lighting facilities."

At the beginning of the night the Arrow Brothers' team came in determined to put across the winning run, but they went down before the slants of Captain Roadboy, who was doing the hurling for the fast traveling Gallupers.

"When the Gallupers came to bat Roadboy urged them to take it out and end the agony, but the twirler of the Arrow Brothers, who had been imported from the big show for this special game, had the Gallupers at his mercy and the first two quickly struck out."

"Then up stepped Timmy Hamon, the husky first sacker of the Gallup-ers, and the first ball up he tapped for a Texas Leaguer. As the ball shot out over the short stop's head just where he could not touch it a deer that had wandered down from the mountain slopes darted across the field."

"At the same instant the flying ball from Tim's bat struck one of the prongs on the buck's antlers and became impaled upon it and ball and deer shot out of sight into the tall timber as Tim galloped around the bases on his circuit clout, winning the game with the aid of the big buck."

The score: Gallupers, 1; Arrow
Brothers, 0.

CITY OFFICIALS
AND COPS LATER

The Famous Game That Was to Have Been Played Monday Has Been Postponed Until Later in Season.

The ball game between the city officials and the members of the police department which was slated for Monday has been postponed for a week or two, due to the fact that the police department is using every available man to care for traffic conditions in the city.

The game will be staged at the Kingston Fair Grounds. It was expected to play it at the Athletic Field, but there are no accommodations for lady fans at the latter place.

TAGGING THE BASES
IN THE MAJOR LEAGUES

Beyond the fact that they hit four homers and made five double plays, the Cincinnati Reds gave Eppa Rixey virtually no assistance in beating the Cubs, 9 to 5.

The Browns stepped out to another half-length lead in the American League race by giving Coveleskie and the Indians a painstaking beating, 10 to 3.

Resuming their daily business of ironing the Phillies out flat, the Giants won another game of the series, 6 to 4, when Smith hit for the clinch with Stengel aboard in the seventh.

Just to prove that the chains of habit are not easily severed, the Athletics sank gracefully below sea level once more by losing the final game of the series to the Red Sox, 4 to 1.

Playing their final game under the management of George Gibson, the Pirates finished a unanimous second to the Cardinals, 6 to 0.

Ivan the Terrible, otherwise Five Thumbed Olson, mugged up a ball game for Cadore and the Dodgers in the sixth inning, his errors allowing the Braves to come from the rear and win 3 to 2.

"A Bone to Pick."

This phrase originated in a marriage custom of Sicily. The father of the bride hands the bridegroom a bone saying, "Pick this bone; you have undertaken a most difficult task." Apparently married life among the Sicilians did not always run smoothly!
